

37. Right and Wrong

Right

1	That's right.	So, you're going to quit English, right?	That's right. I'm bored of English.
2	That's spot on.	There's no demerit to learning English, only benefits.	That's spot on.
3	You've hit the nail on the head.	School encourages mediocrity.	You've hit the nail on the head.
4	You've nailed it.	Japan wants to protect the car industry so is against EV.	You've nailed it.
5	I suppose so.	Fossil fuels should be replaced with Renewable energy.	I suppose so.
6	I'm afraid you're right.	America isn't interested in peace, only war.	I'm afraid you're right.
7	I couldn't agree more.	Homework is mostly a waste of time.	I couldn't agree more.
8	Great minds think alike.	You and I both think life is more than money.	Great minds think alike.

Wrong

9	I'm afraid that's not quite right.	The US is a role-model for the world.	I'm afraid that's not quite right.
10	I'm afraid you're mistaken.	Japanese kids are the smartest at science.	I'm afraid you're mistaken.
11	No, you've got it wrong.	Nuclear power is perfectly safe.	No, you've got it wrong.
12	No that's all wrong.	Climate change isn't a big problem.	No that's all wrong.
13	I think there has been a misunderstanding.	Don't we have a lesson today?	I think there has been a misunderstanding.
14	Bullshit.	Vaccines aren't safe.	Bullshit.

1. When someone is wrong about something, do you tell them they are wrong or stay silent?
2. Why is it important to call out fake news?
